The concrete, steel and glass were always a part of this institution.

They played a major role in sheltering the learning process.

The concrete provided
a solid foundation on which to build.

The steel enabled everyone to reach dizzying
heights of self-involvement
in the process.

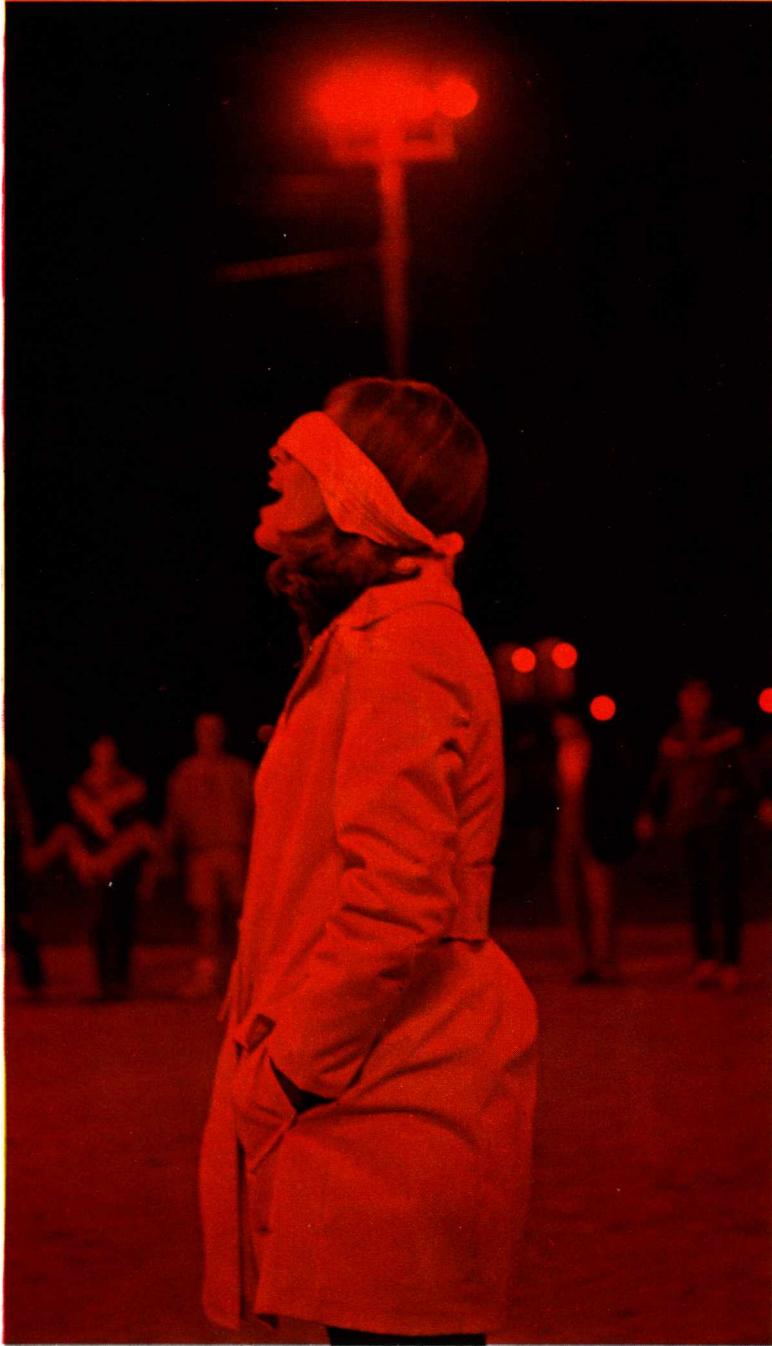

But everyone had to make a choice about the tinted glass.

Some chose to sit back and look through it.

This is a record of those that stuck their heads out and . . .

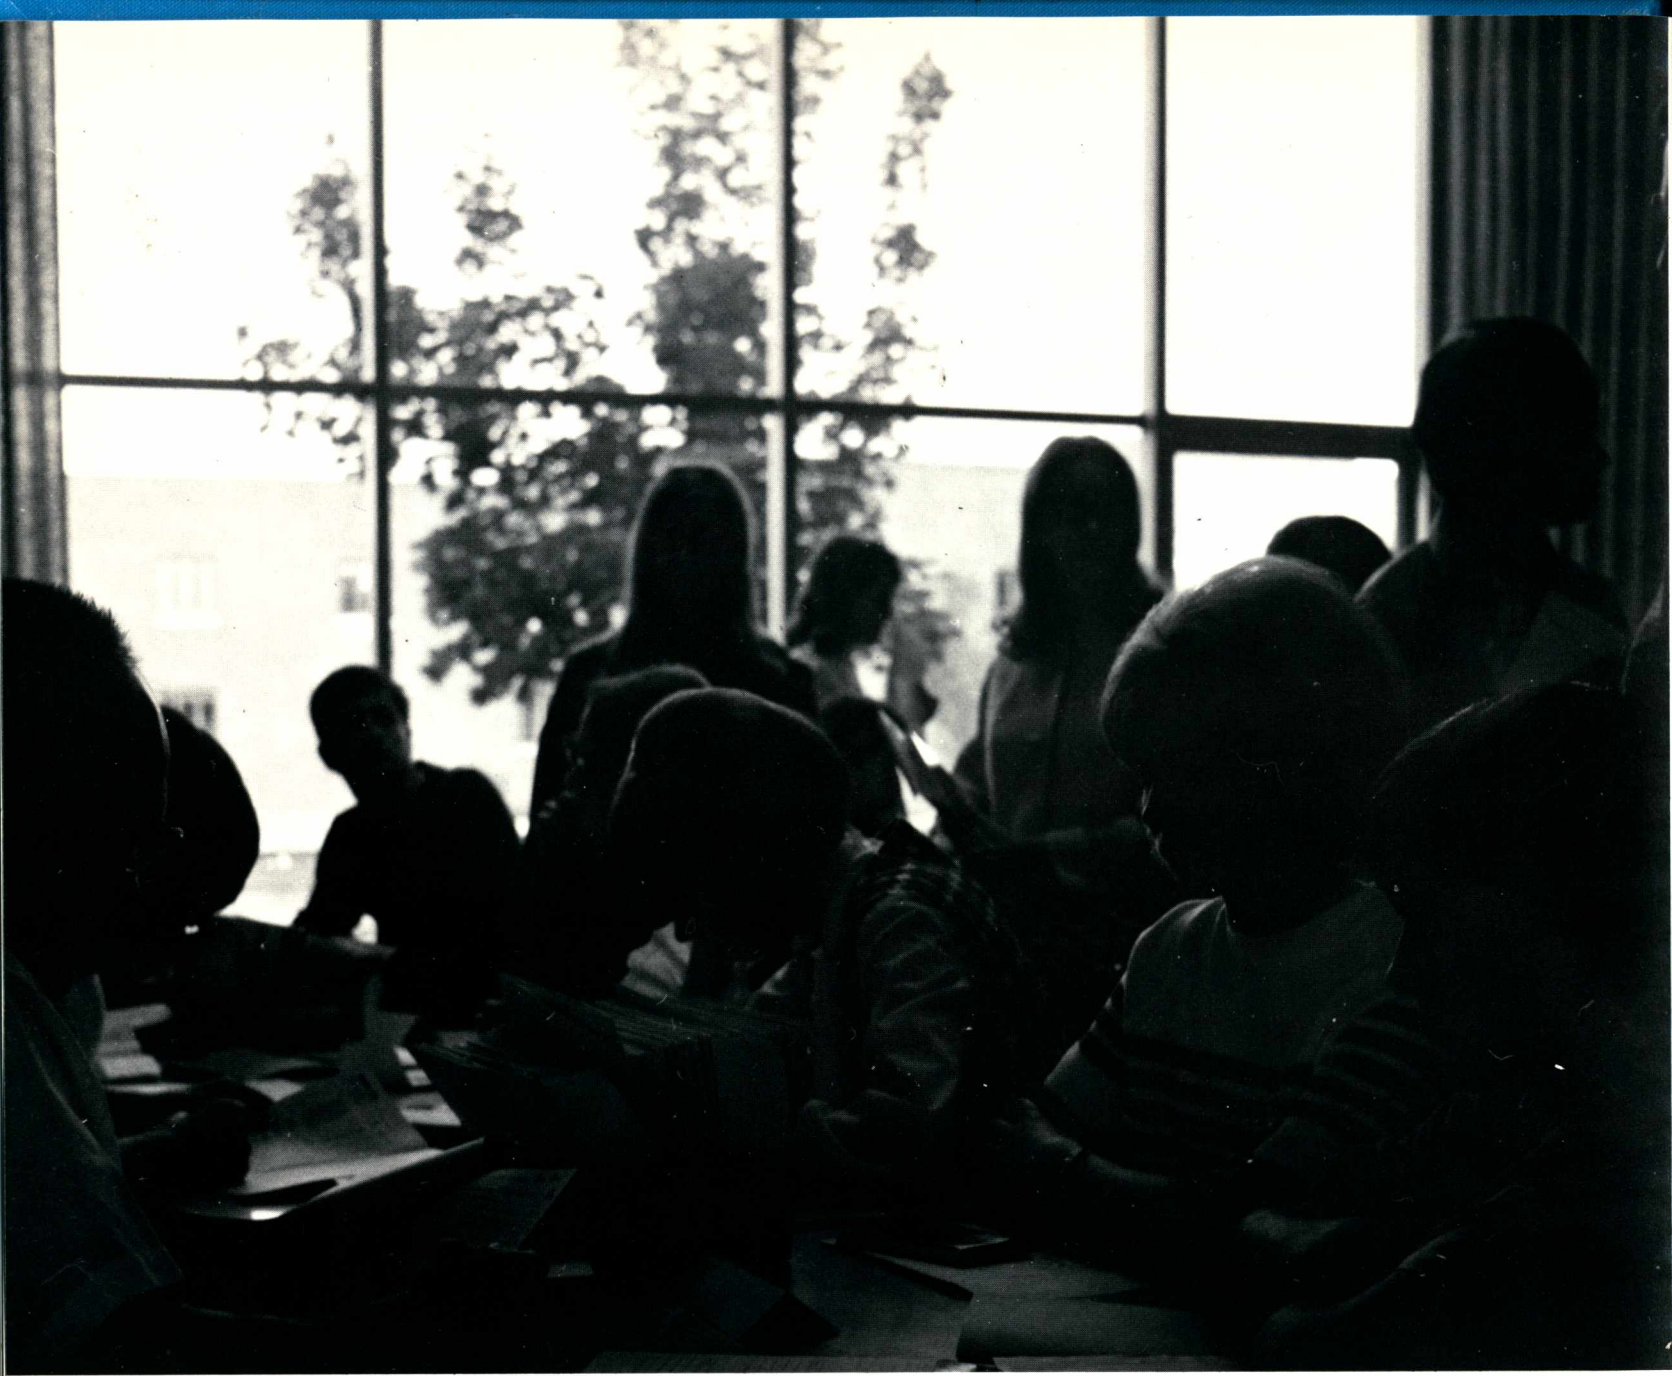

. . . tasted the wind.

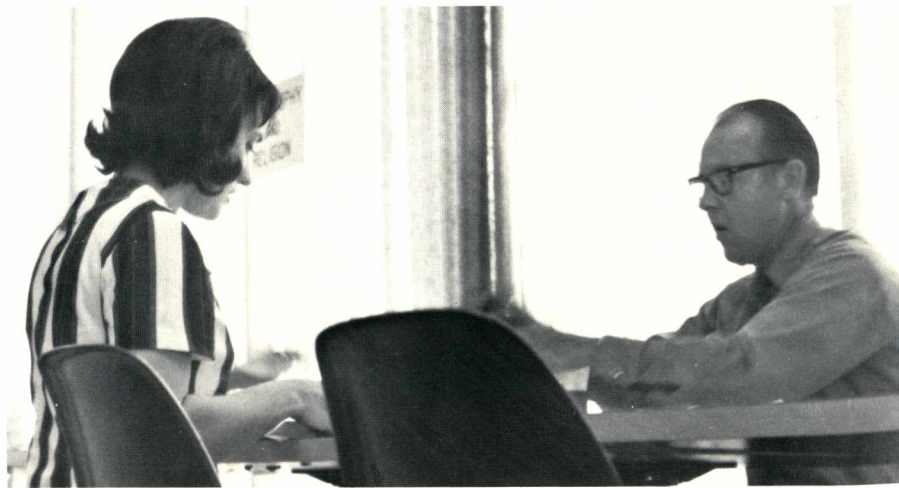

As they learned
to live together
